

ENGLISH (ENG)

Degree offered: B.A.

To study English at Judson College is to engage intellectually in rewarding ways with important literary works written in English and to hone one's own craft as both a writer and literary critic. The English major develops her skills of interpretation and her ability to see the world through others' eyes. A literary text often allows one to perceive human experience from a perspective different from one's own, teaching one about life and ideas across different cultures and periods of time. English majors also learn to appreciate the aesthetic pleasure that great texts offer.

The English Department offers a variety of courses aimed to help students develop their fundamental writing, speaking, and critical thinking skills as well as their ethical understanding. A student majoring in English takes courses emphasizing both breadth and depth of knowledge and addressing a variety of literary periods and genres. The English program is varied enough for students to explore their own particular direction in literature and language. Besides the English major, students may select to minor in journalism, which includes practical experience through internships. The department also offers a variety of creative writing courses, including fiction, poetry, creative non-fiction, and memoir writing. The Scrimshaw, Judson's student literary magazine, is an outlet for creative writing, editing, and magazine layout. The student online newspaper, The Triangle, offers the same opportunities for journalists.

Judson English majors graduate as perspicacious readers, cogent thinkers, and meticulous writers who are well prepared for any profession requiring a rigorous understanding and mastery of language. Many enter the fields of education, law, medicine, business, and the creative arts.
